Reserva Especial Rosé

VINEYARD

The vineyards from Ramadilla Estate are settled in the rolling hills of Marchigüe, where the ocean breeze that comes from the Pacific Ocean permeates the vines during day and night, helping to moderate the temperatures in the growing season and favoring low yields, good concentration and fresh fruit. The soils are granitic, with an important content of clay, but poor in organic matter. Due to the above, this vineyard delivers fantastic power, structure and elegance to its wines.

In the blend, Malbec contributes with its aromatic power, while Petit Verdot adds body.

2019 CLIMATE

During this season the temperatures of November and December were higher than normal, and then in March and April they were quite normal. The summer was marked by heat waves with high temperatures not previously recorded in the vineyard. It was a dry year, with no rain during the summer and harvest. The yields were normal due to a better grape curd in November.

The aromatic quality, balance and concentration of the 2019 wines is outstanding.

HARVEST AND WINEMAKING

- 100% hand picking and sorting of clusters.

TASTING NOTES AND REVIEWS

"Pale and elegant pink color. This Rosé is very expressive in the nose, with tropical fruits like mango and strawberries, in a delicate floral background. On the palate the wine feels fresh and juicy, with a splendid balance between power and elegance. The finish is persistent and clean », Rodrigo Romero, Calcu Winemaker.
